

Stay

by Erin Crowley

February 2006 (#9)

Notes: This was born of one of the FAWM challenges, to write a song using no more than 30 unique words. It was quite difficult to do...and I don't plan to do it again. It was a good exercise though. If I were to expend a little more effort on this song, I would completely throw out the disgustingly trite bridge lyrics (find something a little more original) and maybe add a fourth verse. That might put me a word or two over 30, but it's such a short song, it kinda needs it. For now, I'm just giving this song a little space.

Carve me out a hollow in your hand
Carve me out a hollow in your heart
Carve me out a hollow in your life
Just let me stay, stay....
Let me stay

Fold me, darling, into your pocket
Fold me, darling, into your heart
Fold me, darling, into your life
Just let me stay, stay....
Let me stay

Let me stay
By your side
For today
For all time

Bind my lonely soul to your bones
Bind my lonely soul to your heart
Bind my lonely soul to your life
Just let me stay, stay....
Let me stay
